Kysha Frazier joined CSW in January 2008 and is responsible for bringing effective workforce development strategies to scale through employer engagement and producing innovative products and services to support the growth of existing and emerging industries. As a member of the Business and Industry Strategy team, she also provides project management, sales, marketing, and strategic public/private partnership design.

Prior to joining CSW, Ms. Frazier served as Business Unit Leader of Quest Sustainable Solutions, a consulting division of Cascade Engineering, which she created and launched. Kysha was responsible for identifying and designing innovative solutions to assist Quest's clients in building their social and environmental capital, while assisting with their transition into socially-responsible employers of choice. She has also held leadership positions in higher education and student development.

Frazier earned her Master's degree in higher education administration from the University of Iowa, and holds a second Master's degree in organizational management from Spring Arbor University. Kysha has also received her certification as a Certified Manager from the Institute of Certified Professional Managers (ICPM) and James Madison University.
