Liddy Romero joined Jefferson County Workforce Center in May 2009. She has three years combined experience working in the non-profit sector and ten years combined working in the for-profit sector. She was also a self-employed entrepreneur, specializing in Latino-based communication services for the city of Lafayette, Indiana.

Prior to joining Jefferson County Workforce Center, she gained non-profit experience with the Indiana Chamber of Commerce, working with legislative affairs by marketing and selling their legislative services. She most recently worked for a workforce intermediary 501c3 responsible for workforce operations in a 12-county area of Indiana.

Her for-profit experience includes project management for translation and communication projects, as well as a business development representative for the translation and communication company where she managed short and long term projects for organizations ranging from government, to non-profit, to small business, and Fortune 500 corporations.

Liddy has her undergraduate degrees in Economics and Psychology from the University of Notre Dame. She moved to Colorado with her husband, Mark Strus, in May 2009.
